

Obituary for Aristides Arageorgis by Peter Machamer,
Professor of History and Philosophy of Science at the University of Pittsburgh.

Aris Arageorgis was a big man
Not because he was larger than most Greeks,
But because he had a big, warm, kind and caring heart
I first met him when I gave a lecture at the Polytechnion on recent new work in philosophy of science
Soon after he came to Pittsburgh as a graduate student.
I was on his Ph.D. dissertation committee.

He was my good friend.
He'd call me at home every new year.
I shall miss those telephone calls
I shall miss my friend:
His humor, his warmth, his wisdom
And all the many traits that made him a BIG man.
